Subalternity in the Age of Neoliberal Globalization

Dr. Sarker will discuss infrequently addressed aspects of the racialized and gendered subaltern knowledges in North America and South Asia, through the formation of the identities of two groups—the Minnesota Indian Women’s Resource Center and the Feminist Dalit Organization. This discussion proposes that subalternization, while it signifies the processes of disenfranchisement, has also been reclaimed as an identifiable basis of action.

Dr. Sonita Sarker is Professor of Women’s, Gender and Sexuality Studies and English at Macalester College. Her research focuses on feminist and literary theories; cultural studies of globalization as it intersects with nationalism, democracy, and imperialism; and "minoritized" literatures, with a transnational comparative basis in Western Europe and Asia. She co-edited Trans-Status Subjects: Gender in the Globalization of South and Southeast Asia (Duke University Press, 2002) and is currently working on a book-length project on Sustainable Feminisms.
